The Institute of Contemporary Arts Annual Dinner in honour of Homi K. Bhabha

30 September, 7:00pm, ICA (by invitation only)

The Institute of Contemporary Arts will host a public discussion with one of the world's most eminent figures in post-colonial studies, the Indian-English scholar and critical theorist, Professor Homi K. Bhabha. Bhabha will be joined by the New York Times book critic Parul Sehgal and Professor Richard Sennett, who will draw on their sustained interest in intersecting ideas on sociology and the written word to approach Bhabha's work. Exploring Bhabha's diverse fields of enquiry, the conversation will reflect on key texts and lectures, examining their continued and evolving relevance in contemporary discourse. Bhabha will address 'The Language of Degradation' in contemporary politics, offering a dialogue on some of the most pressing issues of our time.

Following this public event, Bhabha will be honoured at the Institute of Contemporary Arts Annual Dinner. This is the third Annual Dinner, established in 2017 by ICA Director Stefan Kalmár, paying tribute to international public figures (Bryan Ferry in 2017, Chelsea Manning in 2018), aligning with the mission and work of the Institute.

Stefan Kalmár says:

'In a moment where we see a worldwide nationalistic backlash in response to the perceived threats of globalisation, Bhabha is a powerful reminder of the progressive possibilities that globalisation also holds. Bhabha's work has informed the thinking of generations of academics and artists. He developed a theory around the role of the 'Third Space', an in-between space in which new ideas can be formulated, something that the ICA, in its 73-year history, has always striven to be.'

Professor Homi K. Bhabha is one of the most important figures in contemporary studies of colonial, postcolonial and globalisation studies. His key ideas of hybridity, ambivalence and mimicry have been formative for postcolonial theory, while inspiring work in art, literature, art theory, architecture and human rights.
